Barr : In the fall of 2004, Bloomberg added a small feature to its formidable arsenal of analytical tools. Called the Bloomberg Absolute Return Rank, or BARR, the feature allows you to rank the analysts who cover any given stock by the return you would have earned had you followed their recommendations to buy, sell, and hold. Analysts are measured by calculating the total return generated by their recommendation(s) for each individual security they cover. A score is assigned to the analyst based on the analyst's percentile rank compared with all analysts for the security.
